A Lesson To Learn:

Earthday Everyday

As teenagers in America we have grown up in a materialistic society. With the 1980's came a prosperous decade which let us exult in our wealth by throwing away and using up our plentiful resources. Yet were our resources as abundant as we would like them to be? Lately issues involving the destruction of the world have demanded attention. USA's dependence on oil led to disasters such as the damaging spill in Alaska by the infamous Exxon Valdez and possibly our environment in the Persian Gulf crisis (this as a cause is debated). Now with the twentieth anniversary of Earthday came a celebration of our Earth and a new awareness.

On April 22, 1990 the big cities of the US held enormous rallies with celebrities on Earthday. In the nation's capital, for example, a fair full of brochures, posters, displays and pins was cling centers and not turn away when set up on the Mall. This fair was the issues of landfills near our rivers topped off with a large inflated Earth and Vicon plants come up. The ideas

When our students returned from spring vacation that day after this large event, many came back to a school plastered with Earthday posters. Students read environmental statistics from the Crier and some science classes spent a warm afternoon planting seedlings at the edge of our sports fields. Students calculated energy usage in their homes and drew endangered species that were displayed and remembered on the walls. This week of Earth related activities were only some of the ways students studied our environment.

Over a year has passed since that week of celebration and the environmental problems are still present. The true test of American awareness is a cultural that practices what it preaches. Now is the time to find time in our busy lives to take trips to recyand a display by the American Indians. of Earthday are lessons for everyday.

Hakan is seventeen years old, and he enjoys drawing, dancing, sking, and good movies. He also plays guitar and the string bass in Stage Band. He has been to the States before. He spent two years in Texas, so he knew what to exert.

For differences between the U.S. and Sweden, Hakan mentions drugs, crime, food, and the drinking age. In Sweden crime and drugs are not as prevelent. They eat healthier (not as much junk food), and the drinking age is only 18! He also says that his school in Sweden was different because it had a lot more students, and the kids were not under so much pressure. When Hakan grows up he would like to become an architect.

Breaking Barriers

In a society where we look through the world with our own eyes more aften than we are willing to try to view our world through another perspective, breaking barriers is important. During last year and the following summer sone of our students faced the challenge of throwing away old stereotypes to learn new cultures and make new friends. What seems like just an opportunity to have fur and improve your language skills right now could prove to be of extreme value later on as our generation reaches adulthood. When the fate of our world is in our hands will we be as willing to wage war when those in other countries who had been strangers before were now our "brothers and sisters"?

Glasnost Mill River Style

This summer while most kids were relaxing in the summer sun, sixteen students from Mill River and five adults from the area visited the Soviet Union through a program called, "Kids Meeting Kids". When they flew to this country in the last weeks of August a marvelous experience awaited them: they were able to experience the true joy and warmth of the Soviet people. During their stay, these participants were welcomed by Soviet families into their homes and into their lives. "I had a kind, generous family who treated me like their own daughter." reminisced Darci Munson, while Jaenette Murphy added that her host family's treatment of her was also remarkable. "It brought closeness between myself and my Russian family, and between the United States and the Soviet Union."

For Kristin Kinne, this opportunity was the incredible experience of her life. "We weren't just a tour group seeing the sights. We were a group of Americans getting personal tours without personal opinions and biases." she described. Others who went pointed out that the Soviet Union may be a bleak place, but the people aren't. "Sure, we have our traditional, cultural and governmental differences," commented Jason Lorentz. "but we all hold families and friends dear to our hearts."

The Student Council is made up of eighteen Mill River students; three representatives from each grade. The members are assigned to different committees, including student activities and community service, and each committee is headed by a serior representative. The committees work together on small projects, and the entire Student Council works together to accomplish large tasks. This year's Council completed a project which has been in the works for several years: the school sign. The Student Council held various fund-raisers including a penny drive which raised approximately $500, the sale of candy canes, and the sale of shakers and "hands" at leasketball games. The Council also takes part in small school and community projects, such as the partial funding for the repair of a damaged classroom window, and Mr. Probrist sanual "grounds beautification jamboreo". Seniors Arryn Smith, Jason Lord, Jack Sheeran, Secretary Jessica Cecot, and President Kara Sementilli also worked on a partial revision of the Student Council constitution.

It All Adds Up:

This team competes in all of the competitions mentioned above. Its members are chosen with a series of tests that each member takes. The people with the highest four or five averages are out on the team for the year. Several alternates are also chosen. The team is sponsored by several local businesses and support comes from the parents involved as well. From "Mad Minutes" an intense test of basic math skills lasting sixty seconds that is taken regularly at each meeting, to the national competition, Mathicounts is a funfilled, challenging, and exciting program.

Right On Track

A vocational school is often seen as a dead-end for students who want to get out of school. However, it is just the opposite as this account by Jana Mars shows. This center is a place of high standards where intelligent students learn valuable skills...

The Stafford Technical Center is more commonly known as Voc. to many students. I am a first year student at Voc. and proud of it. I ve already learned skills that will help me in the future. I've met many new and interesting persons from different schools.

Voc. is an experience most high school students never get. As a student you learn from hands on experience. The following are a few examples of what is accomplished at Voc.

The culinary arts program has a restaurant, "The Doll House", which is open to the public. The human services course teaches students how to care for other humans' needs. The students run a daycare center under the supervision of teachers. The marketing class learns how to manage and run a business. They have a store right in the school, which is open to other students at the centre. The health occupation program teaches students how to work in hospitals as nurses, and so forth. The students in the program get to work right at the Rutland Regional Medical Center. The auto body course works right on customer's cars. Voc. is a learning experience.

The examples given are just a few of the beneficial courses offered at Stafford. This goes to show that what you put into being a student at Voc. is what you will get out

It's the Annual Science Fair!

On Tuesday, February 26th, and Thursday, February 28th, the cafe-teria, resource center, and various other rooms turned into a gallery of imagination and the sciences at night. Students in grades 7-12 presented projects dealing with life, physical, and earth science to a panel of two judges (teachers and persons from our area with various backgrounds in science).

These projects count for 25% of a student's 4th marking period grade and ideally give a student a hands-on experience in using the scientific method. Throughout the year the students must plan and organize a project, carry it out, and make logical conclusions from the data obtained. Some plan an experiment concerning animals, chemistry or one with psychological aspects. A popular project in these times is one concerning environmental problems and possible solutions. Whatever the projects are, the science fair is an exciting presentation of our students' interests in the scientific world.

After failing to qualify for the playoffs last season, the M.R.U Boys' Soccer Team wasn't really expected to go to the state championship this year. ### Girls' Varsity Basketball

Captained by junior Liz Kelly and seniors Karyn Smith and Kara Sementilli, the dirls' Varsity Baskethall team was one of the toughest and most exciting around. Tough defense by Jessica Cecot and Kara Sementilli, along with the outside shooting of freshman Sara Bailey and junior Stacey Bowen, gave the team balance, but their strength came in big packages underneath the basket in the form of juniors Liz Kelly, Kim Lambert, and Kendra Muelling. At S'11", 5'11", and 6'7, the Triple Towers dominated the backboards against just about everybody. Quality minutes were also played by hard-working reserves Karyn Smith and Dorian Readnour.

Ending their regular season with a .500 record, the Minutemaids were seeded welfth in the tournament and travelled to Lyndon to play the sixth seeded Lady Vikings. They were defeated 63-42, but the girls look forward to a good season next year. Losing only two seniors, the team will be more experienced and should be strong. The Maids had an overall record of 10-11.

Boys' Varsity Basketball

Coached by Mr. Jay Wilson, the Boys' Varsity Basketball team had a good season this year, with a regular season record of 12-8. Senior captains Craig Hahn, Pat Kelly, Matt Bigelow, and Matt Kitchin led the team through an exciting season, and the Minutemen's running game and excellent press always left the fans on the edge of their seats. After losing big man Justin Smith from last year's state runner-up team, the Minutemen had trouble down low at first, but juniors James Ashcroft, Jeremy Nemeth, and Stefan Spazek soon made the transition from JV basketball and complemented the efforts of the veteran backcourt. Three point shooting by Matt Kitchin, Matt Bigelow, Craig Hahn, and Brian Jacobsen proved to be the deciding factor in many games, as did the depth of "the bench".

JAMES ASHCROFT (Oct 30, 1973 -March 17, 1991)

"We are a group of imperfect people gathered together to remember an imperfect person." These were Mr. Jay Wilson's opening remarks at the memorial service for James Ashcroft,

James was a member of the Varsity Basketball team and the Mill River family. A tail red-head with a huge grin and a never-ending sense of humor, it was hard not to like him. Students, teahers, friends, and family attended the memorial service to grieve the premature loss of a friend. Shared memories of James were relayed by Mr. Wilson, and as pictures of the past floated through everyone's heads, a message about the importance of living life to its fullest and making good decisions echoed in everyone's minds. Although James is no longer with us, his memory always will be, and we are all the richer for having known him.

Ah, Wilderness!

The fall show this year was a little-known comedy. Ah, Wilderness, by a well-known playwright, Eugene O'Neill. The actors accomplished a great task just by keeping the attention of the audience during the exceptionally long performance which called for two intermissions. Set In New England in the late 1800's, the script follows the development of three love stories. The first concerns the relationship between Essie and Nat Miller (Abby Smith and Scott Cooper), who realize that after years of marriage they are still in love. The Millers have four children, a student at Harvard (Matt Frary), Richard (Charles Russo), an unsettled boy, Mildred (Cindy Ayres), and Tommy (Chris Henson). The second story is the plight of Aunt Lily and Uncle Sid, (Kendra Muelling and Eric Garland), who are destined to be in love forever and yet never to marry. The central conflict concerns the maturation of the Miller's son, Richard, whose love for a girl, Muriel McCumber (Kym Schmelzenbach), is forbidden by her father, Old Man McCumber (Doug Yaremchuck). In his sorrow, he goes with one of his brother's friends (Jason Lorentz) to experience the coarser side of life, meets Belle (Paula Mulford), a lady of the night, and comes home dead drunk. The bar room is peopled by bartender Chuck Austin and customers Katharine Ayres, Mary Ellen Carter, Robin Lagro, Kelly Doherty, Aaron Auer, and Jim Leach. In the end. Richard reconciles himself to Muriel and they proclaim their love for one another.

Stage 40

Stage 40 is a large group of students in the 9th through 12th grades who come from varied backgrounds and peer groups, bringing a vast array of talents and interests. Whether they are actors or techies, they all have one thing in common; they enjoy working hard to make a show work, and the long hours put into blocking scenes, designing costumes and make-up, building a set, and hanging lights pay off on the night of the show.

Music Is Alive And Well ...

This fall the choral music program got off to a good head start with a permanent teacher (remember having substitutes for the substitutes?). With Ms. Routhier the choral students started working with plans for an exchange in Maine during March and endured the long Evening of the Arts in May.

Chamber singers were busy as usual this year. They performed almost everywhere from the Holiday Inn for the Hed Ribbon Week celebration to the steps of the Chaffee for a holiday reception. During December they traveled to Burlington for the annual Madrigal Fest where they performed and combined with other groups for three songs. On Valentines day four quartets traveled around Rutland and the surrounding towns singing to Valentines customers (and for free ice cream) despite the harsh weather.

The Select Chorus performed this January and this performance was an impressive display of music ability. This group of Jr. High students showed that Mill River has a strong musical future.

Marching On ...

Musicians brave the October cold while practising for their debut as Purple People Eaters. This tradtional first through third period rehearsal during school for the Halloween parade created a tremendous sound and drew students to their classroom windows to see their friends troop by with Mr. Giles' voice booming orders over the megaphone.

In The Right Direction ...

When the marching band streamed through the streets of Rutland arrayed in purple t-shirts depicting Purple People Eaters, their quality and quantity told the Rutland Community a lot about Mill River Union High School. Let's face it. In most schools, sports are the dominant activity. As a result, music programs get shoved aside with little support. At Mill River, on the other hand, music shares the melight with our successful sports teams. With a wealth of student talent and support from the community, the marching band has been able to receive state and MRUHS music is headed in the right direction.

Since winning the Spirit of America award in Washington D.C. the music program has been honored for its success with an invitation to perform in the State House in March of 1990 and the band headed the All-State parade in Rutland in May of the same year. As the Minutemen performed in Maine in March and ended their parade season in the spring decked in the familiar colonial uniforms, they were an example to its audiences that

The Peer Friends is a group of about forty students who provide a student support system within the school, and who work together to promote a healthy student body. The Peer Friends meet every Thursday from 3:00 to 5:00, and the group is structured such that different members drift in and out depending on the schedule of the weeks events, yet there is a ocre group which is present at almost ill meetings. Strong bonds are formed by the members, and the open but confidential environment invites discussion of current issues. As Peer Friend Ellen Brown would put it, "If's a place to get UNSTRESSED!"

S.A.D.D.

The Mill River chapter of S.A.D.D. (Students Against Drunk Driving) is composed of about ten students. These students work with G.M.T.L and the Peer Friends to promote a positive and healthy environment around the school and community. S.A.D.D. members have participated in red ribbon week, and they are responsible for the Contracts For Life. S.A.D.D. members also work hard to educate students about the dangers of drunk driving. They run a booth at the health fair where they educate students about drunk driving, and they sell balloons, pins, and T-shifts.

"If only the world could be like G.M.T.I." For one week during the summer, about four students from Mill River are selected by the current G.M.T.I. group to attend the one-week summer institute. There they meet other students from across the state to create a non-judgemental environment, crain their brains with information, learn how to help themselves and others, and most importantly, learn how to have fun. The workshops given at the institute include Pharmacology, Drugs in Society, Active Listening Skills, Action Planning, and Stress Management, as well as learning new games and overcoming obstacles on the low ropes course. Lasting triendships are formed as students learn the power of trust, sincertry, love and laughter. Back at school, G.M.T.I. members attempt to promote a positive atmosphere, serve as role models, and teach drug and alcohol awareness in health classes.

A junior high institute modeled after G.M.T.L, the Junior High Peer Prevention Project was held at the Mountain Meadows Ski Resort on November 8th through the 10th. The mini-G.M.T.L was staffed by eight G.M.T.L graduates (six from M.R.U.) and twelve adults who work with junior high students on a regular basis, and it was attended by seventh and eighth grade students from Mill River, Barstow, Rutland Town, Fair Haven, Castleton, West Rutland, and Rutland. The students arrived at Mountain Meadows on Thursday afternoon and left on a snowy Saturday evening. During the weekend, the students experienced several workshops which are typically done at the senior high G.M.T.I, such as communition skills and trust-building garnes. They also participated in action planning for programs in their own schools. The attendants were divided into small groups called peer groups in which they could process what they had learned together. # National Honor Society

The National Honor Society is made up of seniors who are chosen by careful evaluation of their personal qualities as well as their academic performance. The N.H.S. at Mill River is not only active in the school, but also in the community. This year's work began in September when members wheeled senior citizens around at the great Rutland Fair. The largest project undertaken every year by the N.H.S. is the organization of Christmas food baskets. Trudy Dias volunteers hours of her time matching families with classes and organizations who want to sponsor a basket, and the N.H.S. takes care of the rest. Fund raising is important when food baskets need to be filled. This year three bottle drives, a poster sale, and a movie-a-thon brought in enough profit to pay for 1000 lbs of potatoes, 150 lbs of carrots, 1000 oranges, 1000 apples, and enough milk, bread, eggs, butter, turkeys, and candy to complete each of the seventy food baskets which were sponsored by various classes, teams, clubs, and organizations. The week before Christmas, the N.H.S. stayed late one night, sorting, weighing, and bagging produce in the school kitchen. Early the next morning the boxes were hoisted into trucks and cars to be distributed throughout the school district. Students found that delivering food baskets not only meant getting out of classes for a day and having lunch at McDonalds, but was a heartwarming experience that would remain with them for a long time. The N.H.S. also donated money to the Rod Sedergren and Ben Perry Memorial Funds, and held other fund raisers to pay for the induction of next year's National Honor Soci-

The Class Of 1996: A New Direction

1991 was a big year for the seventh graders. This was the year these students left their old familiar elementary schools to form a class of about 113 students from seven different towns. No longer the "Big Kids" of the school, these new faces of Mill River Union High School adapted to a sometimes frightening environment full of new people, new rooms and new activities. What these members of the class of 1996 lacked in size, they more than made up for with fresh musical, athletic, mathematical and dramatic talent. Their exploration of new directions will be a time to remember.

A Last Year In Junior High

This year the Class of 1994 grew to become a class of about 124 members. Most of these new classmates came as tuition students from not-sonear towns. Mill River was the high school of choice for graduating 8th graders from Rutland Town and Barstow schools.

No longer among MRU's youngest, the Freshman found many new opportunities available to them. In 1991 some students let their talent shine as members of Stage 40, JV and Varsity sports, and new musical ensembles.

Keep On Exploring ...

This year in 1991 we have embarked on numerous explorations in our lives and in this new decade. Our Seniors have graduated into a new world: adult life. Whether they chose to explore college, the armed forces or a career, the knowledge and friendships they gained at Mill River will guide them through their new experiences. The 7th graders and new students found a school full of opportunites for discovering and developing new talents and facets of their personalities. Exchange students have learned to adapt to new cultures and contributed to a better understanding between peoples. Each of our students will end this year with broadened horizons and await a new year full of new directions to explore. The discovery continues . . .
